Alternate Findings (B) - (continued)

Defendant has previously had the benefit of the Holmes Youth Trainee Act, but nevertheless voluntarily joined five other conspirators who were apprehended by a police task force which was trailing them on their way to rob a credit union in Lansing, MI. The conspirators had put on makeup and had other disguises to alter their appearance. Various members of the conspiracy have robbed up to five other credit unions and collected approximately $100,000. The conspirators have a pattern of passing demand notes demanding somewhere between $30,000 and $60,000, with the threat that people will be injured or killed if the credit union does not surrender the money.

Defendant denies being a substance abuser.

Defendant has never been married, but has an eight-month old child.
